The Tribal Emergency Operations Center (TEOC) personnel and other volunteer staff have been working quickly to pull together essential emergency supplies to provide aid to the displaced families in Haines.

Just last night, the landing craft Front Runner landed in Haines at approximately 9:50 PM to help respond to the aftermath of a landslide. The Front Runner was carrying additional TEOC personnel, emergency response supplies and essential equipment such as an excavator. All supplies were immediately unloaded and prepped for distribution to the displaced families today.

TEOC personnel are working alongside other emergency response teams to continue to assess the community’s needs and are helping to organize cleanup efforts to essential areas such as the airport and other staging areas that are currently flooded.

MONETARY DONATIONS STILL NEEDED
Haines is currently under a Flash Flood Warning which will remain in effect until 3PM today. In the past 36 to 48 hours, record rainfall amounts of 7 to 10 inches have been reported around Haines. Additional debris flows and flooding are possible through this afternoon near steep terrain. The TEOC personnel is assisting in preparation for further storms and landslides that could potentially displace more people as the weather forecast continues to call for more rain through next Monday. There are still 2 people missing due to the landslide. We will continue to provide updates as information becomes available.

Emergency Operations Administrator Corey Padron also reported that the community of Klukwan appears to be intact and unaffected and that all roads to Haines are passable.

At this time, the Haines community needs assessment is showing that family members impacted in Haines are not in need of any further supplies. As a result, the TEOC will be closing its donation drop-off location and focus its efforts on emergency response and raising funds for the community to assist families that have lost their homes or have extensive home damage and repairs to foundations and driveways.
